

Poppy Waddilove

Poppy works mostly with oils, acrylics and a smudge of charcoal, though she always feels most comfortable with her trusty graphite pencil, says Charlee Harris.

London-based artist Poppy, creates graceful and stylish fashion illustrations.

In her pieces she aims to create a timeless elegance in the woman that she portrays, which she does so beautifully in her exquisite Ballerina collection and her other Fashion led drawings.

The inspiration for her work comes from 40's, 50's fashion and portraiture photography.

She says of her works: "I am drawn to the spontaneity of a moment, whether it be a reflective, thoughtful moment or a sudden graceful movement."

From a young age Poppy drew the people she observed and doodled fashion sketches from them.

Her love for drawing compelled her to complete a foundation art and design course at Central Saint Martins followed by an Illustration degree at London College of Fashion.

Poppy's work is now expanding with her recent colour experiments.
